

Spotting Privilege

Police officers make me feel a sense of safety.

Agree

Disagree

I prefer not to answer

who can be called in a time of emergency. However, reports or experiences of mistreatment based on characteristics including race, citizenship status, disability, gender identity, and sexual orientation can result in members of marginalized groups fearing violence or unfair

here to search

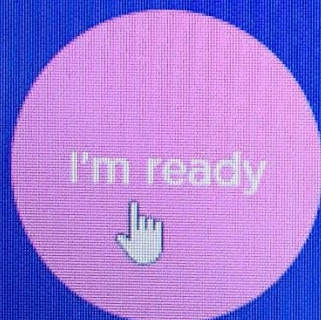

ASUS

Spotting Privilege

In this activity, you'll have an opportunity to practice spotting privilege. You'll be presented with questions about your life experiences, and you'll get to see how your responses compare to other students throughout the country. Your responses are anonymous, they will not be shared with your teacher, and you may skip questions.

Spotting Privilege

Thanks for spending some time exploring the role privilege plays in your life. These questions are a starting point. Recognizing privilege is a skill that takes practice, but the better everyone gets at it, the easier it will be to create an equitable community. There are many resources available if you need support or want to learn more.

Continue

Type here to search

